April showers brings May flowers to devour the longing of warmth on our skin. Then the heat of Summer will smother us with wishes of snow so high, reservoirs overflow old memories of droughts. Without a doubt we move forward imploring what the Spring will bring. Sing Up The Sun was fun; but running, dirt biking, climbing, camping, hiking and kayaking can only be done when Spring is done. So bring on the sun until we can't stand no more.

Roice-Hurst Humane So

Bow Wow Film

This traveling film festival has been hosted by Roice-Hurst Humane Society six times. The event is a wonderful display of the bond between people and dogs. The silly short films give us entertainment outside the realm of normal things to do.

The film features the year's best canine related content made into one funny, 90 minute attention grabbing film. The short films change every year. If you miss it look out for it next year. This wonderful community event is often used for animal welfare organizations. The different organizations can use them for fund raising as well as generating awareness of their programs. Starting in 2015, over $200,000 has been raised for the animal welfare programs.

Sandy Higgins says, "COVID has had an impact on Roice-Hurst Humane Society, just like other non-profits and we see that in our event turnout. Although we have not seen a significant decline in support from the community in terms of monetary or supply donations. The Grand Valley has been and continues to be a supporter of our mission to "promote bonds between pets and their people," and supports our community programs as well as all of our fundraising efforts."

She also says they did not see an increase in adoptions during the pandemic; however, it does look like the creativity really came out during this time. Who fries up can of sliced dog food to make their face it; who is going to give up their best friend in such a claustrophobic time?

Thankfully they didn't need the extra room. The Humane Society has been serving the Grand Valley since 1963 and continues to grow our programs to work closely with shelters

Just because the faces are fresh, doesn't mean experience isn't flowing from their lips. The talented Wind Symphony from Colorado Mesa University brought the audience a fabulous display of their hard work.

Colorado Mesa Wind Symphony

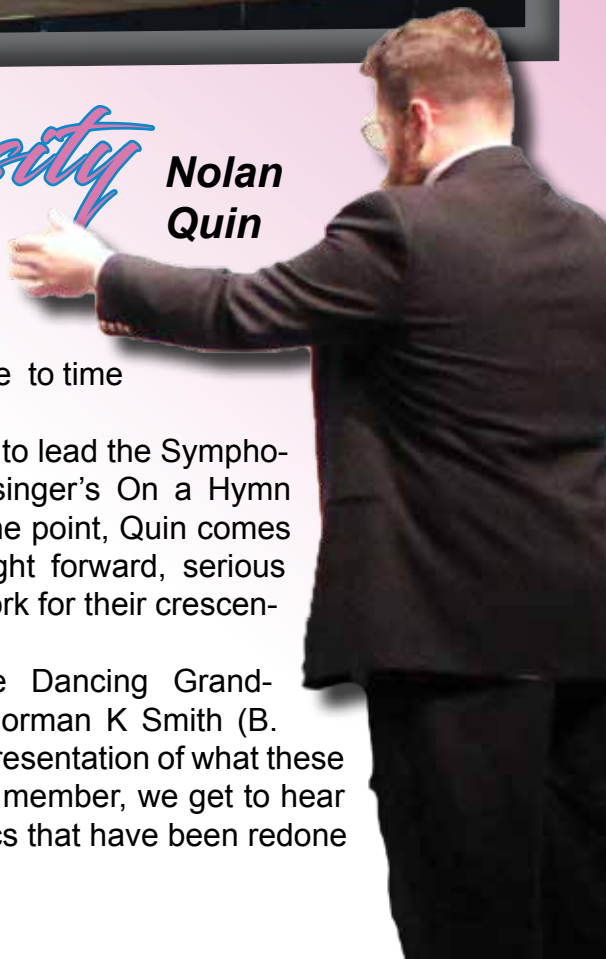

Excitement murmurs through the crowd as we patiently wait for the main Conductor, Dr. Jonathan Hinkle to enter the stage. Dr. Hinkle, Director of Band at the Colorado Mesa University Music Department has been with the College for 10 years. With a long history of teaching music, Dr. Hinkle comes on the stage with experience emanating from his aura. He is very sure of himself and his students. It's a pleasure to watch him work! You can see Dr. Hinkle on the cover.

The Wind Symphony nonchalantly waits for their queue not showing an ounce of nervousness. They are excited too, but have been diligently practicing for this moment. The tension dissipates with the first few breathes as the notes come together to bring us Vox Populi - Songs and Dances of the people from the Grand Valley and Beyond. As they go through the first few moments, the Wind Symphony delights us with an Adagio tempo of classics we have all heard from time to time in motion pictures.

Nolan Quin is then given the baton to lead the Symphony and crowd through David Holsinger's On a Hymn song of Philp Bliss. Absolutely to the point, Quin comes in demanding business. His straight forward, serious demeanor makes the musicians work for their crescendos.

The Premiere Performance, The Dancing Granddaughter's March composed by Norman K Smith (B. 1951) shows us an outstanding representation of what these musicians can do. As an audience member, we get to hear something different then the classics that have been redone over and over. The new classical music kept our attention and we found ourselves waiting for more.

The two student Conductors that directed have completely different composures. It's fun to watch their style as arms' fling and their statures' change. Trystan Berg is all smiles; he had fun and the crowd did with him. Maybe the other conductors did as well, but Berg was into it enough to lip sync sounds he wanted the musicians to make, which is also cool to watch. The two student Conductors were in their final classes and intend on furthering their musical careers.

Among the audience were children. Not one of them disturbed the symphony. They were all fixated and content with the extraordinary music booming at them.

This was a wonderful performance at a low cost. If anyone needs something different to do, they might want to look at some of the upcoming performances by the Wind Symphony and others playing at CMU's Robinson Theater.

They will be posted in upcoming issues; however, you can also go to the website and purchase tickets early.

PALISADE

Chamber of Commerce

What a great way to talk about business! It is surprising to find such a cool way to do Business After Hours. For a first event with the Palisade Chamber of Commerce, it was welcoming, fun and useful. People brought their kids, there was an UTV maintenance race and connections were made that don't usually happen during the fast pace of normal business hours.

Both kids seemed to be hesitant at first; no kid wants to go hangout with a bunch of adults. Once the kids knew it was Adrenaline Driven Adventures, the hesitation diminished and allowed them the opportunity to try something outside the box.

The Business After Hours meetings that the Palisade Chamber of Commerce holds are catered, monthly events to perpetuate and simulate business not only in Palisade, but all of Mesa County Businesses. As long as your business is in Mesa County, you can join as well.

This event wouldn't have been possible without the support of Local Businesses such as Adrenaline Driven Adventures. The Chamber tries to hold the Business After Hours in different location every month to keep it interesting.
