Coming into July has been rough for a lot of people. Financially, the country seems on the verge of recession, people turn to violence; which seems to be a common theme since Jan. 6th, and political tension is thick enough to taste.

The sour ambiance left in the mouth is only compounded by the rising cost of gas, food and other commodities we previously took for granted. Housing is an issue spilling into the streets, as the number of homeless continues to grow at an exponential rate.

While people try to figure out gun and abortion laws, our local neighbor is trying to feed their kids. They can't find an affordable place to rest their neck. Sure it looks like there are plenty of jobs, but if you are stuck in the cycle of fending for your very life everyday, shortsightedness starts becoming the only focal point.

Our only hope is to remember that we are united by our community and country. Celebrate the small things, such as the freedom to hike, bike or lavender around the valley! We had to bring you more festivals...

PUBLISHING & DESIGN JESSE FORNWALT

We have some great events coming in July and August to prepare for. Both the City of Fruita and Palisade are hosting weekly concert series outlined in the Event's Connection sections. Featuring local artists, the free concerts are held on different days so people won't miss one, going to the other. Las Colonias park has been hosting famous names, but Mesa County Connection always goes out of our way for those needing promoted most. Besides most Las Colonias tickets are sold out faster than a peach stand in New Mexico!

Articles covered in July's issue range from hiking the Mica Mines and fruitlessly researching it's abandonment, to Blue Grass music, a 90's throwback band, and such an abundance of lavender, we celebrate the diverse plant! Of course music and beer help to elevate the nonchalant atmosphere lavender projects and Palisade is synonymous for.

August will be the 12th issue of Mesa County Connection and the first time we cover the Palisade Peach Festival. It will be fun to see the unique things people have found to do with their surplus of peaches. We look forward to seeing you out there and talking with you about what should be in the magazine next year.

The Mica Mine experience is much different as the sun barely creeps over the horizon. During the more animated parts of the day, you are sure to find a parking lot full, and people at every turn in the meandering trail. The bustling footprints of days past scurry in erratic directions, as people forget the reason this trail even existed. Careful consideration and planning went into making this path, and we don't even know why it was abandoned.

We can be thankful it was carved with dedication, while we wonder in awe at the pure tenacity and determination these folks had to do what they did. The 2.6 mile round trip, shows us man's conviction to get the desirable even in the face of "Jacob's Ladder" (the unofficial name of the cascading rock steps entering the trail).

This mid-level trail can still be traversed by inexperienced hikers. In fact, it's a good way to prepare for some of Mesa County's more arduous trails. The brilliant colors make for stunning eye-delicacies, with shining bits of quartz and mica throughout the hike.

Early morning seems to be the best time to make this journey. The bird's song's are unobstructed by the heat of the day, and the mosquitos haven't quite taken their first bite. Other animals are still scarce, but the well trodden road is overwhelmed with human scent giving adequate warning.

Mica Mine's

Demise

This path has long since been claimed by humans. Though research shows nil on the subject of disregarding this dubious path, we can only imagine a flash flood wiping out the bridges and other man made structures mother earth really doesn't care about. We do know man cares about productivity, and lots can be done with mica.

According to the Minerals Education Coalition, mica is a silicate mineral, heat resistant and does not conduct electricity. There are 37 different kinds of mica, the most relative ones are used for filler in gypsum wallboard joint compound, paint, beauty products, well drilling, rubber molds and electrical insulators of all kinds.

The need was there; however, the hazard to profit ratio looks unbalanced. This rough terrain could only sustain man's lust for luster as long as sediment settles. Once the water returns, the hard work washes away leaving the reminiscence of our forefathers. Even to this day, erosion caused a landslide releasing 70 tons of rock in April 2020, says the City of Grand Junction. Fortunately we were left with majority of the trail to commend the miner's; even if the best time is now the crack of dawn.

Blue Grass & Roots

Lavender

The summer has already been filled with fun! Palisade continues bringing people together with an amazing lineup of events worthy of capturing attention. Live music, local people and great dancing are starting to become a tradition at River Bend Park.

Over the last several months, Mesa County Connection has covered numerous events in Palisade that has helped us find our place in the community. From art & music, to dancing & outdoor adventure, this corner of our valley not only delivers a broad spectrum of entertainment, but also provides the capacity for entrepreneurship.

We may never have heard of bands such as The Brothers Comatose or The Dirty Grass Players if it wasn't for Palisade showing us who they were.

Rich with an array of instrumental sounds, both bands brought excitement. Their energy and sound were contagious and feet can't help moving even if you are sitting down!

Playing a mix of originals and classic cover songs with a Blue Grass twist, the bands are on tour from out of state, but would love the opportunity to be heard by us again. Both bands can be found on Facebook with readily available music.

As a new publication, Mesa County Connection knows the importance of accepting new ideas and change. It's important to think creatively and harness that ability to perpetuate a vibrant community.

The town of Palisade is a pillar for attracting these types of individuals. The ones that bring robust ideas and unique insight to the potential uses of space and product.

You can bet the people that make Palisade a wonderful place to live are made of hustling entrepreneurs! This does seem to be a consistent theme around the valley; however, Palisade stands firmly distinctive on avenues of creativity!

Who knew Lavender had such a following? With so many different varieties and uses; Palisade knew!

Of course there was beer to help jazz things up a bit. Featuring the longest line, Highlands Craft Distillery provided our crowd with the liquid courage to spark a more intimate relationship with the beautiful plant. As faces bury in the bosom of lavender blossoms, it's clear we need to find out more about the fragrant herbage.

According to multiple sources lavender has many beneficial uses. Of course aromatherapy and herbal medicine have used lavender for years, but the history of lavender's first uses date back to Egyptian times. Healthline also goes on to discuss uses for insomnia, Anxiety, Hair Loss, Headaches and Migraines.

The National Cancer Institute says "aromatherapy can help people with cancer manage their side effects of Chemotherapy.

CONTINUED

The list continues! Depression, Acne, Burns, Skin Conditions and Wound Healing. Lavender can be taken in many forms and infused with other products such as honey. The Tri-River Master Gardeners show us examples and explain the 37 different varieties of lavender other than the most typical.

Because the plant is drought-tolerant, it would make sense that many lavender farms have made their way to the Western Slope. The cash crop offers many ways for people to branch off into diverse products. We see more and more lavender popping up everywhere! The plant is not native to North America, but offers awesome contrast to our gorgeous landscape. Because it does have the capability to grow with less water as it matures, the dry, high-desert climate is perfect for this plant to flourish.

As we see, a number of different vendors have zeroed in on lavender's potential. The city of Palisade also recognized this and put together a celebration not only for lavender, but the countless entrepreneurs that have found their place with this crop. The Violet Pines, shown on the last page played laid back music with an almost spoken word theme. They can be found at various venues this summer, including Palisades concert series listed under Event Connection.

There hasn't been a time at Warehouse 2565 that is not packed! The atmosphere is wonderful. From musicians ready to give their all, to dancers unconcerned with anything but getting down. The active location hosts live music weekly featuring headline musicians and local bands.

NINETY PERCENT

Ninety Percent 90s out of Denver has played at Warehouse 2565 twice. Covering mainly 90s music, they have been together for 10 years. With over 200 songs they cover, they played a little of everything until they find what the crowd really likes.

Scott, lead guitar and backup vocals, says they have been playing long enough that they know how to read the crowd. When they started playing Back Street Boy's, unexpectedly, the crowd broke out in cheers, and a small band of groupies formed to the right of the stage. Crazy that a boy band that hasn't been together in decades still has this much influence!

It's a tossup which part was busier; the bar with the Avalanche game on, or the Live music with Ninety Percent 90s. Fortunately the cover was only $10, so if you wanted to switch back and forth to keep an eye on the score, the option was there.

Besides having cheap entry fees most of the time, Warehouse 2565 also has free admissions on some of their events. With two bars and a VIP section upstairs the location really is classy.

For those of you who need a seat, table reservations are available, but also fill up quickly. The crowd is usually mixed age, ranging from mid 20s to later 60s and beyond, which allows for a calm, reassuring crowd. People are friendly, decent and smile the whole time.
